ISBN: 979-8307274613

Synopsis: Recognizing that many are unfamiliar with the history of our state until shortly before the Battle of the Alamo, this book seeks to relate tales of the men and women living in what was New Spain during colonial times—Native Americans, European immigrants, African Americans, and those of mixed ancestry.

Rooted in historical facts, these stories are uniquely told from the perspective of children and thoughtfully crafted for a fourth-grade audience. Written and illustrated by Texas State Daughters, some stories reflect cherished family histories passed down through generations—stories of ancestors who journeyed as immigrants to New Spain, whose descendants are now proud members of our Society.
